2- 3 year old princess dress up

Getty + Disney When you're part of the royal family, dressing up for galas and black-tie events is just another part of the job. But what happens when princesses dress up as, well... Princesses? You can't deny the similarities between any of these sartorial crossovers. We combed through our favourite former royal look to round up all the times royals took inspiration from Disney's most famous characters. 1 of 58 Cinderella Cinderella debuted its iconic powder blue ball gown when the animated film was released by Disney in 1950. The dress was created by magic by her fairy godmother. 2 of 58 Queen Elizabeth 3 of 58 Kate Middleton rivalled the Disney princess as she attended the Spectre premiere in a long-sleeved chiffon Jenny Packham gown. The royal even threw her brunette hair up in a chignon à la Cinderella. 4 out of 58 Princess Diana One of Princess Diana's most iconic red carpet looks was the strapless chiffon Catherine Walker dress she wore to the 1987 Cannes Film Festival, reminiscent of Cinderella's famous dress. 5 out of 58 Meghan Markle Meghan Markle looked regal in a Safiyaa evening gown during her royal tour of Fiji. The Cape detail reminds us of the layered skirt of Cinderella's ball gown. 6 out of 58 Cinderella After Prince Charming pushes the glass slipper onto Cinderella's foot, she wore a long-sleeved scoop-neck wedding dress with a full skirt and subsequent veil, held up by, yes, birds. 7 of 58 The Duchess of Sussex When Meghan Markle said I make her own Prince Charming (Prince Harry) in May 2018, her dress had a bateau neckline, as well as long sleeves. 8 of 58 Belle Beauty and the Beast was released in 1991, and shortly after Belle's golden yellow ball gown became synonymous with the character. 9 of 58 Princess Diana looked absolutely radiant as he arrived at a film premiere in London in a satin ball gown designed by Murray Work in 1985. From the light yellow color to the silhouette of the entire skirt, the princess looked just like Belle. 10 of 58 The Queen Mother under the Queen Mother's white fur stole is a beaded Belle-yellow dress, which she wore to the premiere of 84 Charing Cross Road in 1987. 11 of 58 Princess Anne Princess Anne wore a silk dress in 1992 to the Young Farmers Golden Jubilee Ball, which reminds us of Belle's dress for its pale yellow hue and puffy sleeves. 12 of 58 Aurora When Disney's Sleeping Beauty was first released in 1959, the film's princess stunned in a gorgeous off-the-shoulder pink evening gown. 13 of 58 Princess Diana We wonder if Catherine Walker had seen Sleeping Beauty when she designed this blush off-the-shoulder evening gown. Between the white folded neckline and the drop-waist silhouette, Diana looked just like Aurora during a visit to Germany in 1987. 14 of 58 Queen Elizabeth wore a dress that matched Aurora's signature pink for a banquet in Hungary in 1993. She topped the flowing dress with ireland tiara. 15 of 58 Meghan Markle We see definitely between Meghan Markle's blush off-the-shoulder Carolina Herrera dress from 2018's Trooping of the Colour ceremony with Aurora's evening gown. 16 out of 58 Kate Middleton Kate Middleton looked like a modern-day Aurora at the 100 Women in Finance gala in 2019. The Duchess wore a rose off-the-shoulder chiffon dress designed by Gucci. 17 of 58 Aurora While Sleeping Beauty's Aurora is known for her pink ball gown, the princess's dress changes to periwinkle in the film, thanks to her fairy godmothers. 18 of 58 Sophie, Countess of Wessex The Queen's daughter-in-law wore a flowing empire-constricted evening gown to the wedding of Prince Carl of Sweden. The muted color and flowing silhouette remind us of Aurora's second dress. 19 of 58 Princess Diana The dreamy Bellville Sassoon dress Princess Diana wore to the theatre in 1981 is reminiscent of Aurora's second dress, thanks to off-the-shoulder designs and pale periwinkle color. 20 out of 58 Jasmine Although the Princess of Agrabah has some outfit changes in Disney's Aladdin, Jasmine is best known for her turquoise two-piece set. 21 out of 58 Kate Middleton While flashing the midriff would be a violation of royal protocol, Kate Middleton did wear a flowing turquoise dress by Jenny Packham to a charity concert in London in 2012 which is very Jasmine-esque. 22 of 58 Queen Elizabeth The vibrant blue dress Queen Elizabeth wore for the Royal Variety Show in 2001 perfectly matches the shade of Jasmine's outfit. The Queen herself accessorized with bold statement earrings, just like the Arab princess. 23 out of 58 Meghan Markle The colour of the turquoise crêpe midi dress Meghan Markle wore to the Endeavor Fund Awards in 2020 resembles jasmynes - and both outfits have since become iconic. 24 out of 58 Jasmine Jasmine wears a red version of her two-piece set during the film's most intense moments - when Jafar takes control of the city. 25 out of 58 Kate Middleton The red off-the-shoulder Alexander McQueen dress Kate Middleton wore in Berlin in 2017 was a bold choice for the Duchess - and dare we say Jasmine inspired? 26 of 58 Princess Diana arrived in Venice at the Peggy Guggenheim Collection wearing a red two-piece set by Jacques Azagury. Yes, we said two of them. 27 of 58 Elsa Princess Elsa's icy blue dress won't come to fruition until she embraces her mysterious powers. Result? A form-fitting beaded dress and cape 28 by 58 Princess Diana The ice blue strapless mini dress that Princess Diana wore to a private viewing at Christie's auction house in 1997 reminds us of Frozen's ice queen. 29 out of 58 Kate Middleton In 2017, the Duchess of Cambridge arrived at the Royal Variety Show in a glittering Jenny Packham evening gown that looked like it was lifted straight from Elsa's wardrobe. 30 of 58 Queen Elizabeth channelled the frozen monarch in 2002 when she wore an icy blue dress covered in silver beads and a chiffon scarf, reminding us of Elsa's flowing gown. I thought I had of the painting painting but I don't. First I wiped down the trunk with a damp sponge and drained down a couple of protruding tackles. Since my basket was made of unfinished wood, I didn't have to do anything extra to prepare it to paint. Then I put down a dropcloth and began to sponge the trunk with a smoky purple interior wall paint. When it dried, I daubed metallic gold craft paint in a random pattern. The result was strangely akin to a dragon egg finish. Picture: Shutterstock There was a time when being a princess, in the real world, was just a matter of being born into the right family, or if you were very lucky, getting married into it. You had to produce an heir, but other than that, very little was expected of you in terms of good looks, morality, fashion sense or anything of that kind. If you were a Disney princess you may well get to do some magical things and probably have a really big animal sidekick, but unfortunately, real princesses historically don't even get to enjoy these things. Today, however, it's about far more material things being a princess - whether it's real or fictional. Princesses are refined, educated and extremely well connected. Real princesses must be diplomats who know all about global affairs, but at the same time avoid interference in politics, while ensuring that the charities they condescending are well served. They are figureheads that give some spark and hope to people, confer awards and honorary positions on civilians. They usually speak a variety of languages, dress beautifully and behave with enormous dignity. Do you have what it takes to be a princess? Take this quiz to get your princess percentage!
